A SET OF ROGUES

CHAPTER XVIII.

Being somewhat of a coward, I essayed to put Moll off with a story of her father having gone a-frolicking with Don Sanchez, leaving it to the don to break the truth to her on his return. And a sorry, bungling business I made of it, to be sure. For, looking me straight in the eyes, whenever I dared lift them, she did seem to perceive that I was lying from the very first, which so disconcerted me, though she interrupted me by never a word, that I would scarce stammer to the end of my tale. Then, without asking a single question or once breaking her pained silence, she laid her face in her hands, her shoulders shook, and the tears ran out between her fingers and fell upon her lap.

"I know, I know," says she, putting me away when I attempted to speak. "He has gone away for my sake and will come back no more, and 'tis all my fault that I could not play my part better."

Then what words of comfort I could find I offered her, but she would not be consoled and shut herself up in her room all the morning. Nevertheless she ate more heartily than I at dinner, and, fresh visitors coming in the afternoon, she entertained them as though no grief lay at her heart. Indeed she recovered of this cruel blow much easier than I looked for, and but that she would at times sit pensive, with melancholy, wistful eyes, and rise from her seat with a troubled sigh, one would have said at the end of the week that she had ceased to feel for her father. But this was not so, albeit wounds heal quickly in the young and healthful, for I believe they who weep the least do ache the most.

Then, for her further excuse, if it be needed, Don Sanchez brought back good tidings of her father—how he was neatly lodged near the cherry gardens, where he could hear the birds all day and the fiddles all night, with abundance of good entertainment, etc. To confirm which she got a letter from him three days later, very loving and cheerful, telling how, his landlord being a carpenter, he did amuse himself mightily at his old trade in the workshop and was all agog for learning to turn wood in a lathe, promising that he would make her a set of eggcups against her birthday, please God. Added to this, the number of her friends multiplying apace, every day brought some new occupation to her thoughts; also, having now that £2,000 old Simon had promised us, Moll set herself to getting through it as quickly as possible by furnishing herself with all sorts of rich gowns and appointments, which is as pretty a diversion of melancholy from a young woman's thoughts as any. And so I think I need dwell no longer on this head.

About the beginning of October, Simon comes, cap in hand and very humble, to the court to crave Moll's consent to his setting some men with guns in her park at night, to lie in ambush for poachers, telling how they had shot one man in the act last spring, and had hanged another the year before for stealing of a sheep, adding that a stranger had been seen loitering in the neighborhood, who, he doubted not, was of their thieving crew.

"What makes you think that?" asks Moll.

"He has been seen lingering about here these three days," answers Simon.

"Yet to my knowledge he hath not slept at either of the village inns. Moreover, he hath the look of a desperate, starving rascal, ripe for such work."

"I will have no man killed for his misfortunes."

"Gentle mistress, suffer me to point out that if thou lets one man steal with impunity others, now innocent, are thereby encouraged to sin, and thus thy mercy tends to greater cruelty."

"No man shall be killed on my land. There is my answer," says Moll, with passion. "If you take this poor, starved creature, it shall be without doing him bodily hurt. You shall answer for it also."

"Not a bone shall be broken, mistress. 'Tis enough if we carry him before Justice Martin, a godly, upright man, and a scourge to evildoers."

"Nay, you shall not do that till I have heard his case," says Moll. "'Tis for me to decide whether he has injured me or not, and I'll suffer none to take my place."

Promising obedience, Simon withdrew before any further restrictions might be put upon him, but Moll's mind was much disturbed all day by fear of mischief being done despite her commands, and at night she would have me take her round the park to see all well. Maybe she thought that her own father, stealing hither to see her privily, might fall a victim to Simon's ambushed hirelings. But we found no one, though Simon had certainly hidden these fellows somewhere in the thickets.

Hearing Moll's cry of joy he opened his eyes.

While we were at table next morning we heard a great commotion in the hall, and Mrs. Butterby, coming in a mighty pucker, told how the robber had been taken in the park, and how Simon had brought him to the house in obedience to her lady's command.

"But do, pray, have a care of yourself, my dear lady," says she, "for this hardy villain hath struck Mr. Simon in the face and made most desperate resistance, and heaven protect us from such wicked outlawry as have the villainy to show themselves in broad daylight!"

Moll, smiling, said she would rather face a lion in the day than a mouse by night, and so bade the captive to be brought before her.

Then in comes Simon, with a stout band over one eye, followed by two sturdy fellows holding their prisoner between them, and this was a very passionate man, as was evidenced by the looks of fury he cast from side to side upon his captors as they dragged him this way and that to make a show of their power, but not ill looking. In his struggles he had lost his hat, and his threadbare coat and shirt were torn open, laying bare his neck and showing a very fair, white skin and a good head of light, curling hair. There was nought mean or vile in his face, but rather it seemed to me a noble countenance, though woefully wasted, so that at a glance one might perceive he was no born rascal, but likely enough some ruined man of better sort driven to unlawful ways by his distress. He was of a fair height, but gaunt beyond everything, and so feeble that, after one effort to free his arms, his chin sank upon his breast as if his forces were all spent.

Seeing this, Moll bade the fellows unbind him, telling them sharply they might see there was no need of such rigor.

Being freed, our prisoner lifts his head and makes a slight reverence to Moll, but with little gratitude in his look, and placed himself at the end of the table facing us, who sat at the other end, Moll sitting betwixt Don Sanchez and me, and there, resting his hands for support upon the board, he holds his head up pretty proudly, waiting for what might come.

"Who are you?" asks Moll in a tone of authority.

He waits a moment, as if debating with himself whether to speak fairly or not; then, being still sore with his ill treatment and angered to be questioned thus by a mere girl—he, as I take it, being a man of 30 or thereabouts—he answers:

"I do not choose to tell. Who I am, what I am, concerns you no more than who and what you are concerns me, and less, since I may justly demand by what right these fellows, whom I take to be your servants, have thus laid hands on me."

"How do you answer this?" asks Moll, turning to Simon.

Then Simon told very precisely, as if he were before a magistrate, how this man, having been seen lingering about the court several days and being without home or occupation, had been suspected of felonious purposes; how, therefore, he had set a net to lay wait for him; how that morning they had entrapped him standing within a covert of the park regarding the house; how he had refused to give his name or any excuse for his being there and how he had made most desperate attempts to escape when they had lain hands on him.

"Is this true?" asks Moll of the prisoner.

"Yes," says he.

Moll regards him with incredulous eyes a moment; then, turning to Simon, "What arms had he for this purpose that you speak of?" says she.

"None, mistress, but 'would be a dread villain verily who would carry the engines of his trade abroad in daylight to betray him." And then he told how 'tis the habit of these poachers to reconnoiter their guard by day and keep their nets, guns, etc., concealed in some thicket or hollow tree convenient for their purpose. "But," adds he, "we may clearly prove a trespass against him, which is a punishable offense, and this assault upon me, whereof I have evidence, shall also count for something with Justice Martin, and so the wicked shall yet come by their deserts." And with that he gives his fellows a wink with his one eye to carry off their quarry.

"Stay," says Moll, "I would be further convinced"—

"If he be an honest man, let him show thee his hand," says Simon.

The man innocently enough stretches out his palm toward us, not perceiving Simon's end.

"There!" cries Simon. "What said I? Is that a hand that ever did a day's honest work?"

"'Tis no worse than mine," says Moll, regarding the hand, which in truth was exceeding smooth and well formed. "Come," adds she still more kindly, "you see I am no harsh judge. I would not deny a fellow creature the pleasure that is not grudged, the covey that runs across my lawn. Tell me you were there but to gratify a passing caprice, and I'll forgive you as freely as I'll believe you."

This gentle appeal seemed to move the young man greatly, and he made as if he would do more than was demanded of him and make that free confession which he had refused to force. But ere a word could leave his parted lips a deadly shade passed over his face, his knees gave under him, and staggering to save himself he fell to the ground in a swoon.

Then, while all we men stood fixed in wonderment, Moll, with the quick, helpful impulse of her womanhood, ran swiftly from her place to his side, and dropping on her knees cried for water to be brought her.

"Dead of hunger," says Don Sanchez in my ear. "Fetch a flask of brandy."

And then, laying hold of Simon by the shoulder, he pointed significantly to the open door. This hint Simon was not slow to take, and when I returned from the buttery with a case of strong waters I found no one in the room but Don Sanchez, and Moll with the fainting man's head upon her lap, bathing his temples gently. Life had not come back, and the young man's face looked very handsome in death, the curls pushed back from his brow and his long features still colorless like a carved marble.

Then, with a "my lackaday" and "alas," in bustles Mrs. Butterby with a bottle of cordial in one hand and a bunch of burning feathers in the other.

"Fling that rubbish in the chimney," says the don. "I know this malady well enough." And pouring some wine in a cup he put it to the dead man's parted lips.

In a few moments he breathed again, and hearing Moll's cry of joy he opened his eyes as one waking from a dream and turned his head to learn what had happened. Then, finding his head in Moll's lap, and her small, soft, wool hand upon his brow, a smile played over his wasted face, and well indeed might he smile to see that young figure of stern justice turned to the living image of tender mercy.

Perceiving him out of danger and recovering her own wits at the same time, Mrs. Butterby cries: "Lord, madam, do let me call a maid to take your place, for, dear heart, you have quite spoiled your new gown with this mess of water, and all for such a paltry fellow as this!"

Truly it must have seemed to her understanding an outrageous thing that a lady of her mistress' degree should be nursing such a ragged rascal, but to me, knowing Moll's helpful, impulsive disposition, 'twas no such extraordinary matter, for she at such a moment could not entertain those feelings which might have restrained a lady of more refined breeding.

The pretty speech of Mrs. Butterby, reaching the fallen man's ear, seemed instantly to quicken his spirits, and casting off his lethargic humor he quickly staggered to his feet while we raised Moll. Then, resting one hand upon the table for support, he craved her pardon for giving so much trouble, but in a very faint, weak voice.

"I would have done as much for a dog," says Moll. "My friends will render you what further services are fit, and if it appears that you have been unjustly used, as I do think you have, be sure you shall have reparation."

"I ask no more," says he, and he bowed as I may much doubt seem."

"Justice shall be done," answered in his stern manner that he considered Moll to have promised of justice. For mercy happeneth love, as third way, but it doth breed gratitude and hesitancy by making one's self content with one's self and pleased with taking no notice with obnoxious.

"I will leave my proclamation there upon that matter."

"May," says I, "lest it be supposed that his intent was be rude you."

"What then?" says she. "Why he not as much right to this castle as we? And are we safe while the fellow may be, save in the more fortunate part of our designs? Understand, pray, I describe, with passion, "I will have added to his subjugation."

I found the gentle grace [illegible] and Moll's good [illegible] food before him. But he would nothing but bread, and that as dry as though it were the sweetest morsel in all the world. I had the dun to the kitchen, and there in an undertone told him of Moll's decision, and whether her word of supreme authority accepted him, that I cannot say, because of his [illegible] humor, but he answered me with a surly one inclination of his head, and then fell speaking of other matters in our usual tone, until the young man, having satisfied the cravings of nature, spoke.

"When you are at liberty, gentlemen," says he, "to question me further, I will answer you."

THE MARRIAGE TIE.

Men and Women Not to Be Judged by the Same Standard.

Whether it is that we are prudes, or that we are more luxurious and pampering in our tastes, and that the girls of today require more in their marriages than the ordinary Englishman can afford, I cannot say, but unless girls have great beauty or large fortunes we hear much more of the difficulty of their marrying. Among the mass of women, however, there is no revelation from the marriage tie, and all healthy minded girls and women seem to be just as much interested in the question as were their grandmothers. The one great fact that does kept English society in the fundamentals of the marriage tie. Indelicacy in a married woman is surely reason enough to justify her husband in casting off her, and the woman who obtained the divorce on the same grounds as men is purely lowering the standard of female purity in a ruthless way. In instinct, when his stronger, coarser, more animal nature, to be judged by the same standard of chastity as a woman, with his higher ideals of life, his purer nature, and the exemption from temptation which she enjoys?

If we think for a moment of the temptation to which men are exposed from their very early youth, and which they undoubtedly combat very successfully, and which attacks them at a time when they are most prone to succumb—in the period of youth, vigor and ignorance—and contrast their position with that of women, we might hardly feel that we are dogmatizing rashly when we ask for a corresponding code of morality, or even suggest that women are to be tried by no higher standard than that to which men strive to attain.

We are told that no writer can improve the conjugal customs and intensity of English married life. Perhaps the new woman thinks so because in her sphere of sexual passion no feeling of consecration or gratitude is possible. We believe that the overwhelming majority of old fashioned English women regard that intimacy as one of the purest and sweetest ever devised—one which, when the passion and desire of youth fades away, blossoms into a friendship, a companionship as constant as it is holy, without which their lives would indeed be barren.—Lady Jeune in Nineteenth Century Review.

A REMARKABLE VENDETTA.

An Old Man Avenges Mother Since Dead in the Same Manner.

"Did you ever hear of a strange, old-bodied man going crazy from grief?" asked Captain Delaney of the steamship City of Pueblo, on the water front yesterday. "I don't mean one of your highly sensitive creatures," continued he, "but a man 6 feet 4 inches in his stockings, and as strong as an ox. Of such a man I heard during my last trip to the sound. He is a Russian Finn and is possible on every subject save one. He has a vendetta against the walrus, and his cabin in the wilds of Alaska is built up with their skulls.

"According to the story told me by a passenger who came down with me from the sound, this man [illegible] Alaska [illegible] years later the mother died, and all the affection of the half savage dotted centered on the son. Nothing was too good for the lad, and everything in the way of hunting and fishing here was taught him.

"When the boy was old enough his father took him out on all his hunting expeditions and soon the youngster became working on his own account.

"One fatal day he ventured on the walrus, but instead of killing it he himself was the victim. When the father saw the dead body of his son he was wild with grief, which finally settled into a spasm of madness. How all he lives for is to kill walrus.

"When the mania first seized him he lived in a dugout. Now his hut is on the ground and consequent upon many of walrus skulls.

"He crawls up behind the beast while they are asleep, and, subduing them by the tusks, murder them on the spot. The main force. He looks into the eyes as though seeking to remember his mother killed his son, and then he hacks away the rest. The head is then cut off, and done to make one more to the number he is raising to the memory of his mother.—San Francisco Call.

Prejudice was originally nothing more than a judgment formed before hand, the character of such judgments being best indicated by the popular meaning of the word.

The division of time into seconds, this weeks is so old that its origin cannot possibly be ascertained.

The Discovery Saved His Life.

Mr. G. Caldwell, Stapleton, [illegible] ville, Ill., says: "By the use of Dr. Discovery I owe my life. I was taken with la grippe and tried all the remedies for five miles about, but of no avail. I was given up and told I had but a few days to live. Dr. Kind's New Discovery was then recommended. I got a bottle and was much relieved after taking it. I got a second bottle, and after using three bottles was up and about again. In a few days I gained in weight 25 pounds. My weight is now 140 pounds. I will never be without Dr. Kind's New Discovery in the house. A. W. Detweiler's cost A. B. Armstrong & Co's drug store.

THE Campbells didn't come in Ohio that election day

HAYWOOD, candidate for State Treasurer, had a plurality of 134,261 —very fair for an off year

WHAT has become of Don Cameron's and Joseph Sibley's presidential booms? Evidently laid up in the dry dock

THE "blue grass regions" all nobly and "My Old Kentucky home will be sung with more heartiness than before

PETER F SMITH of Lackawanna county, was the lucky D mocrat to carry off the Superior Court Judgship honors.

KENTUCKY will send a Republican to represent her in the United States Senate This means a new era for Kentucky

PHILADELPHIA is now undergoing investigation by the Lexow committee, which commenced its work last Monday afternoon

THERE is certainly one Democrat in old Kentucky who is not the thing any tears over the late defeat and that is Billy Breckinridge

THE mushroom growth of Colis Financial School became too top heavy and the consequence has been that it has disappeared as rapidly as it came.

THE more Russia looks at Turkey the more he runs into waters. Philadelphia Inquirer We have had the same experience and it keeps on increasing every day as Thanksgiving approaches

THE Republican vote in Pennsylvania fell off 17 per cent and the Democratic 11 per cent from what it was last year The Prohibition vote fell off 15 per cent and the Populist vote fell off about 10 per cent

WAYNE COUNTY this State is now anchored to the Republican column Democratic majorities in Pike for State Treasurer carried it in 1874 by 19 plurality Haywood Republican candidate carried it this year by 167 plurality

D W VOORHEES of Indiana, the Wall Sycamore of the Wabash says the Democrats ought to nominate Grover Cleveland for the Presidency as he is the only Democrat having the confidence of the masses. Daniel must be in his dotage

OUT of the 67 counties in the State of Pennsylvania, 16 were carried by the Democrats 8 out of the 16 by a change of 125 votes would have been classed in the Republican column, and in some of the 8 counties 10 votes would have changed them to the other side

THE best explanation we have heard of why Kentucky went Republican was given by a Grand Army veteran last Tuesday He said "The boys in blue went down to Louisville to attend the G A R re-union and drank up all the Kentucky bourbon, and it was the first time the Kentuckians had been sober enough to vote the Republican ticket

OUT of the 10 States of the Union, the Democrats gained control of most of them in the election of 1892 At the present time they have control of but nine, to wit Texas Arkansas Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, Florida, South Carolina and Virginia. This is a sad showing for the party which claimed in 1892 that the Republican party was dead

JUDGED by the election lately held the people did not seem to take much stock in the stories of the Democratic press that the Wilson-Gorman bill was making the times better and that factories were starting up all over the land and better wages were being paid What little prestige the Democratic journals enjoyed heretofore has been sadly lowered in the eyes of the people

THERE are two cuts in the last American Economist representing the American farmer in 1892 and 1895 The first date represents a well to do farmer, neatly dressed, looking over the wheat exportation and price of 1892 when we exported 157,250,351 bushels of wheat at 81 05 1-2 per bushel The second cut represents a farmer of the 'Georgia Cracker' style with a five land badge on the seat of his pantaloons and a very dejected cast of countenance, viewing the wheat exportation of 1895 which was 75,831,-539 bushels at 50 1 2 cents per bushel The two illustrations speak plainer than words. Comment is unnecessary

CLEVELAND is seeking a third term and a fourth nomination As the Democrats have no hopes of electing their candidate for the presidency by all means give Cleveland the nomination, and he will readily discover his actual calibre. He has been posing as the consecrated knight of free trade, the Moses that would lead the people to a land of promise flowing with milk and honey," over the tortuous route of free trade. Instead of milk and honey they have found principally hunks. If Cleveland and Wilson had been able to have fully carried out their ideas of free trade, the country would have resembled West Virginia at the close of the war, as far as industries were concerned By all means give him the nomination and he will be relegated back to his proper sphere which he enjoyed prior to 1882.

IT HAS been a broken week, and just before and after elections in the most important States operations rarely have much significance Business may be largely affected in time, but as yet there is scarcely any indication what the effect will be. Stocks and products are weaker, and there is some decrease in the number of establishments at work, both for reasons having nothing to do with questions of government. The approach of a session of Congress commonly lowers prices of some Trust stocks, and no one now expects either monetary legislation or any issue of bonds to influence prices. The controlling power at present is the effort to readjust prices after the remarkable rise of last summer to important materials and products, with the struggle of great combinations to prevent decline.—Dun.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Special Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11th, 1895.—Mr. Cleveland and his Cabinet after mature consideration have arrived at the wonderful conclusion that the overwhelming Democratic defeats of last week were endorsements of the administration and condemnation of the anti Cleveland Democrats. Was anything more illogic ever conceived outside of the walls of an insane asylum? It is egotism run wild These self-blinded individuals will never realize the disgust the people of this country feel for their demonstrated incapacity until the election returns of next November are counted then they will have the remainder of their lives to see themselves as others see them

Herman Hill and the other anti Cleveland Democrats are going, unless their friends in Washington are misinformed as to their intention to give Mr Cleveland another chance to see whether his personal following is as large as he thinks it is by helping to nominate him for President again They charge him with having made it impossible to elect any Democrat President and say that he shall bear the ignominy of being the only man who was ever twice defeated for the Presidency of the United States. That will suit the Republicans, as they would rather defeat Mr Cleveland than anybody else

The Republicans are naturally delighted at the prospect of not only regaining the Presidency next year, but of having control of both branches of Congress, a majority of the Senate after March 1, 1897, having been made absolutely certain by the result of last week's elections. Nothing but some stupendous blunder on the part of the Republican majority in the House at the coming session of Congress can prevent Republican success next year and with the man of iron will and proved sagacity Thomas B Reed, in the Speaker's chair, no such blunder will be made. This is so well known by the Democrats that they are now depending solely upon their ability to defeat Reed for the Speakership. Should Cleveland succeed in packing the Democratic caucus by the usual methods of bulldozing and intimidation and thus secure the nomination of the House, Reed will be defeated, but the chances are that the Democratic caucus will refuse to be bulldozed and intimidated by Cleveland and will nominate some one else. Should this be the case Reed will be elected Speaker by a large majority and the Democrats will have the pleasure of seeing the Republicans organize the House and control legislation for the next two years.

Ex Senator Hansbrough, of Nebraska, who is in Washington in connection with the sugar bounty cases in which he is chief counsel, says "The Republicans are in a position where they can take any man for a Presidential candidate They do not have to figure on the chances of this or that man for election Their candidate will be elected no matter who he is nor what State he comes from"

The administration is understood to be considerably troubled about the Cuban question and several members of the Cabinet are urging in view the failure of Mr Cleveland's Hawaiin policy are trying to persuade him to make no recommendation on the Cuban matter in his message to Congress, further than to call attention to the information (sending the Documents with the message) gathered by the State Department and to request that Congress shall define the policy to be pursued by this government. If he accepts that advice it will indicate that he has learned something by experience, but he will have to do it before next people will believe it possible

How are the mighty fallen' E Ellery Anderson, of New York, one of the original cuckoos, has been officially snubbed by Hoke Smith, one of the second crop of cuckoos. Mr Anderson is one of the men appointed by Mr Cleveland to look out for the interests of the government in the Union Pacific Railroad Quite awhile ago he made some recommendations to Secretary Hoke Smith, concerning the patenting of lands to that railroad company by the U S Land office Not hearing anything about his recommendations, Mr Anderson ventured to remind the Secretary of them and to ask that he say what he intended doing about them He was curtly informed that the Secretary did not deem it advisable to pass on the recommendation, either way, as Congress would probably legislate on the subject at the coming session It was probably this snubbing of a Cleveland worshipper that was responsible for the rumor that Mr Smith was contemplating an early retirement from the Cabinet He isn't doing anything of the sort he is enjoying his prominence to the full and is using it to help along his ambition to succeed Gen Gordon as Senator from Georgia. If he can get the vacancy in the Supreme Court he will gladly take it, otherwise he'll stick to his present job

The Republican party might have lots worse candidates than Senator Quay would make and then not have a bad one, but Senator Quay has no idea of becoming a candidate next year notwithstanding Democratic stories to the contrary.

CAME HOME TO THEM

"Chickens, like curses, come home to roost This seems to be the plight of the Maryland Democracy To keep Republicans out of office the legislation of Maryland has from time to time passed laws authorizing the governor to appoint to office in counties that happened to give Republican majorities all officers, who had formerly been elected by the people, such as sheriffs, clerks of the court and even down as low as school directors. This law will give the new Republican governor elect a grand opportunity to clean out almost every Democrat that holds office in Maryland. .This will be like taking a dose of physic, but the new governor, being a good American citizen, will find it necessary to execute the Democratic law

WELL, Bob Ingersoll will have to reform now, as Kentucky has gone Republican.

When the chill blasts of the Morning
flang like a pall over the surface of the earth,
it will be well for you before venturing into the raw vaporous air, charged perhaps, with the seeds of malaria or provocative of rheumatic twinges to take a wineglassful of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and thus shield yourself from atmospheric influences threatening to health. If you happen to get soaked, forbid chill and fever upon, use the same preventive, and avoid the rheumatism or a danger ous cold. The agreeable warmth infused into the circulation by this genial stomachic, its invigorating and regulating properties commend it to all appreciative of the fact that prevention is better than cure Use the Bitters for dyspepsia, biliousness, nervousness and kidney trouble, sick headache and debility

GEORGE IRONS.

A. G. Bartley, of Magic, Pa., writes I feel it a duty of mine to inform you and the public that DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve cured me of a very bad case of eczema. It also cured my boy of a running sore on his leg. A. W. Colegrove.

One of "Gene Field's Latest Poems.

The wind comes whispering to me of the coming green and cool—
Of restless blackbirds chattering besides a reedy pool,
It brings me nothing fancies of the homestead on the hill,
And I hear the thrush's evening song and the katydid's unending trill
As I fall to thinking fondly of those I used to know
Where the sassafras and sunflowers and checkerberries grow

What has become of Kate Marsh who lived on Baker's Hill?
And what's become of Noble Frail whose father kept the mill?
And what's become of Lizzie Crum and Annie Spaulding, too?
And of Kevin Lord, who trained school in Kansas for spell?
They were the boys and they the girls who shared my youthful play—
They do not answer to-day All! My playmates —where are they?

What has become of Lucy and his little brother Jim
Who lived next door to where we lived some forty years ago?
I'd like to see Lafe Warner as I the Conkey boys again
And talk about the times we used to with that we were one!
And one I shall not name her—could I see her gentle face
And hear her childish treble in this distant place!
The flowers and hopes of springtime—they perished long ago
And the garden where they bloomed is white with winter snow

O cottage 'neath the maples, have you seen those girls and boys
That lost a little while ago made, oh! such pleasant noise?
O trees, and hills, and brooks, and lanes, and meadows by your leave
I shall find my little friends of forty years ago
Or else I am so weary and I've traveled one to far
That in the Valley I may then see I wander where they are?

Italian Superstitions.

Superstition is rife especially in many rural districts in Italy. Lately a farmer in Sicily refused to let a young couple be married because Friday, the day on which they wished to be married, was a day of ill omen. Such a belief is not confined to the peasantry, but is held by many of all ranks. If, after all, the couple are married in spite of the omen, they are sure to be unlucky. Napoleon I. is said to have had a great dislike to Friday, and Napoleon III. was very superstitious in this respect.

ST. VITUS DANCE.

A Physician Prescribes Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine.

Dr Miles Medical Co. Elkhart, Ind

My daughter Mattie aged 14, was afflicted last spring with St Vitus dance and nervousness her entire right side was numb and nearly paralyzed We consulted a physician and he prescribed Dr Miles' Restorative Nervine She took three bottles before we saw any certain signs of improvement, but after that she began to improve very fast and I now think she is entirely cured. She has taken nine bottles of the Nervine, but no other medicine of any kind.

BOROUGH ORDINANCE.

AN ORDINANCE PROHIBITING THE RIDING OF BICYCLES ON THE SIDE WALKS OF THE BOROUGH OF SMETHPORT, FIXING THE PENALTIES FOR THE VIOLATION THEREOF, AND PRESCRIBING A MODE OF COLLECTION OF SUCH PENALTIES.

Be it ordained and enacted by the Burgess and Council of the Borough of Smethport, and it is hereby enacted by authority of the same that from and after the passage of this ordinance, no person, male or female shall ride a bicycle on any stone or plank side walk in the Borough of Smethport, and the riding of bicycles by any person on the said sidewalk or sidewalks is hereby declared to be unlawful.

And the Burgess, High Constable or any Constable of the Borough of Smethport, hereby authorized and empowered to arrest those who, without any lawful authority, may be found violating this ordinance, and upon conviction before the Burgess or any Justice of the Peace of said Borough, who shall proceed to hear and determine the cause in a summary manner. And any person who shall upon such hearing be found guilty of the violation of this ordinance shall be sentenced by the said Burgess or Justice of the Peace, as the case may be, to pay a fine of FIVE DOLLARS and costs of prosecution, and in default of the payment thereof, to be imprisoned in the Borough lock up not exceeding seven days.

All ordinances inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed

Passed by unanimous vote of Council this 23 day of September, 1895.

—The trustees of the M. E. church here have raised the salary of their pastor $100 more than it was last year.

—Mrs. Elizabeth Smith was discharged from jail Monday by the county commissioners under the insolvent act.

—The people of Ceres were not favorably impressed by the new rules, the vote being 65 against 9 in favor of them.

—The man who cannot utilize advertising in his business has no business to be in business, and generally isn't in it.

—Orlf Hector and wife are rejoicing over the arrival of a little daughter which put in an appearance on Monday last.

—Mr. and Mrs. John Wilcox, of Barbank Hollow, were made happy on Friday last by the arrival of a bouncing boy baby.

—And still nothing is done about the bridge by the bakery. It will probably be left as it is until some one breaks an arm or a leg.

—The Sasse brothers have now secured the agency for the Rochester laundry, and are now prepared to wait on their customers better than ever.

—C. H. Service, a dentist of Mt. Alton, was committed to jail by Justice Knapp last Saturday night on the charge of violating the liquor law.

—The children of Mrs. Daniel Cornelius desire to return thanks to the friends in Farmers Valley for their kindness to them during their sad bereavement.

—Read the prospectus of the Philadelphia Press on the fourth page.

—Street Commissioner Ramer has been putting in some new crosswalks on Fulton street.

—Frank Tims was discharged from jail Monday by the county commissioners under the insolvent act.

—An exchange tells of a woman who who died at the age of 103 years and had lived in three centuries, having been born in 1792 and died in 1892

—We publish on our fourth page this week the prospectus of the Philadelphia daily and Sunday Inquirer Look it over.

—Dogs are killing sheep down at Eldred. The Eagle speaks of 11 being killed in one night belonging to P. McCabe

—Enough rain fell last week to enable the splashing down of some logs in Potato creek. The mill resumed operations Monday morning much to the delight of the crew

—John Carlson has secured the contract for building the sewer on Martin street from Water to King street. This will be a great improvement to the residents along this street

—Jack Frost displayed his artistic skill Tuesday night by the beautiful decoration seen on the mountain Wednesday morning. The hills were all crated over with a silver sheen.

Andrews & Conkling, of Olean, advertise goods for the holidays. Don't fail to read what they say in reference to these goods. Their adv will be found on our second page.

Attention is called to important changes made in the time-table of Coudersport & Port Allegany R. R., to which has been added the stations on the new extension to Ulysses.

—Last Sunday Rev. J. W. Sanborn preached a very eloquent sermon on the prophecies of the Bible. He entered most heartily into his subject and kept his audience very much interested

—Olean seems to be infested with highwaymen. A man by the name of E. V. Wood was held up one night last week and robbed of a $100 watch and $15 in money. The robbers made their escape.

In another column will be found one of Wayne Eddy's latest poems speaking of his youth and early playmates. It will come home to the heart of everyone, who has passed the meridian of life and is on the downward grade

—Thanksgiving three weeks from yesterday. Then stuff of turkeys and pumpkin pies will be rife in most American families, except the poor newspaper man's. He will very likely dine sumptuously on mush and milk

The jury list of December term 1896 contains the following names of men who are residents of Smethport at the present time. Phillips Ford was grand juror and E. D. Calkins and S. G. Curtis were on the Travers jury

—In another column will be found a notice of a meeting to be held in the grand jury room of the court house on Thursday, Nov 21 by the Agricultural and Breeders society of McKean County. All interested should attend this important meeting

—Don't fail to look over Barnes, Hengerer & Co.'s mammoth advertisement on our first page. This firm, owing to the death of Mr Barnes, are closing out their immense stock and you will be repaid by nothing the great bargains they are offering.

H. W. Rubb & Co. have decided to close out their opera house store and in order to do so quickly have inaugurated a closing out sale. Be sure to read their ads on another page of this issue. It is in your opportunity to buy anything in this line cheap

Dr. McKean's Journal of Sept 11 1895 has the obituary notice of Dr. Asa Hamlin, who died on Tuesday the 8th of the month. Dr. Asa Hamlin was the father of our esteemed townsman, Hon. H. D. Hamlin, and grandfather of Judge Henry Hamlin the banker

John Vilkh, a Polish tramp, was shot by a night watchman at Riverside Saturday at the railroad crossing near Carrollton. Vilkh and another tramp tried to run things to suit the watchman and the watchman objected. A fight ensued and Vilkhe was shot and has since died

—Knapp Creek has a character in the person of James Erwin, who needs a good dose of whipping post judiciously administered. He has been beating his daughter and relating an officer, but has finally landed in Buffalo penitentiary, where he will serve a four months' sentence

—Butterworth, of the Enterprise says there is no man in the moon for if there was the Coudersport girl would have been up after him. They never would have had a chance. If there had been a man there old Mother Eve would have taken a hand at capturing him when old Adam made such a fuss over the apple

—George Northrup has withdrawn as a partner in the Kane daily Republican which he worked so hard to establish, owing to failing health. The Mirror hopes he will soon regain his usual vigor and be able soon to engage in business again. Col. Rogers now has the sole management of the Republican.

—The report reached us last Saturday that Wesley Beeson, of Ladona (Coudersport) was fatally injured by a lumber dock of the old Glace mill at that place falling on him. He was under the dock getting out some lumber, when, without a moments warning, it fell upon him, crushing him so severely that the doctor said he could not recover —On a dark night lately one of our townsmen was badly frightened by seeing the eyes of the Goddess of Justice flash fire over the darkened condition of our streets. The old lady from her high and exalted position had evidently discovered some poor wayfarer groping his way homeward in the dark; hence her displeasure. Come, gentlemen, give us more light.

The MIRROR calls the attention of the honorable board of school directors of the boro to the matter of keeping the school house closed until nine o'clock, and compelling the children to stand in the cold and thus endanger their health. At least open the outside door and give them the run of the corridors where they can get warm. We have heard of cases where the children are sick from the exposure.

—The barn of J. W. Hosaler, on the Two Mile, says the Reporter, was burned two weeks ago to-day, with all its contents. The fire was started by a woodchuck who had his hole under the barn. Mr. Woodchuck has been out on the hill foraging when there was a forest fire burning and he ran to his hole for safety. A coal of fire had fallen on Mr Chuck's back and he set the building on fire. This is a sad blow to Mr. Hosaler.

—Earl Silsbee is confined to the house by a severe case of erysipelas.

—Mrs. Betsy Slack was taken very ill on Tuesday night with hemorrhage of the lungs. She was a little better on Wednesday.

—Drilling on Barney Brook well, No. 4, was discontinued a few days ago after a week at a depth of 1,900 feet and abandoned as a dry hole.

—Editor Herrick, of the Ceres Mail, has lately returned from his trip to Atlanta and now is telling his many readers his experience among the Georgia crackers.

—W. H. Wetenhall met with quite a painful accident at Crosby by a pile of lumber falling on his left ankle on Tuesday, which will result in confining him to the house for a few days.

—The sidewalks at East Smethport from the bridge to the depot are still in a dangerous condition. In order to avoid accidents while strolling in that vicinity "keep in de middle ob de road."

—The annual ball of the Bradford Typographical Union will be given at Orphans' Hall in that city Thanksgiving night November 28th. These balls are important social events and are always well attended.

—Martin Burrows, a six year-old school boy while engaged at play with some of his schoolmates, received a severe cut on his forehead from a stone thrown by one of them. It was quite painful, but not a serious injury

—A revision of the game laws fixes the season for killing book agents from September 1st to August 31st, scandal mongers may be shot at any time, and the open season for hunting beginners on the corner is from January 1st to December 31st.

—Last Tuesday the night was made hideous by the boisterous action of three young men much to the disturbance of our citizens. They are known and their names will be published if they persist in their misconduct and they they will be published accordingly.

—In another column will be found a communication from Aiken denying the charges of unfaithful being supplied to the school at that place. We published the article in good faith as coming from reliable authority. It is with pleasure that we give space to the denial.

Reports reached us Wednesday that Elder McClellan of Mt. Jewett, had been making strenuous efforts to become an angel by a wind mill route, but his estimated better half did not wish to span him so as Democrats were so scarce and hence prevented his aerial flight to realms of bliss.

—Do not read any of our advertisements this week for if you do you will be very much astonished at the wonderful bargains offered. There are so many changes by the different advertisers that we are unable to call attention separately to all of them, but a surprise awaits you at the perusal

—Superintendent W. P. Eckles, of McKean county was one of the instructors at the Teachers Institute, and seemed to have lost none of his earnestness in the cause of education. He has been a forceful official in the school work in McKean county and no drones or ignoramuses find favor in his sight.—Journal

—The MIRROR and the New York Tribune are offered together for the small sum of $1 75. Here you have two good weekly papers for a little less than 2½ cents per week. The Tribune furnishes you all the national and foreign news, while the MIRROR strives to give you all the local events, besides containing a good family story. Club the two together and secure the most reading for the least money to be obtained anywhere.

Mrs. Eugenia Hamlin has been having extensive repairs put on her residence. Her kitchen has been enlarged 6 by 12 feet, a rear stair stairway has been built and the floors of the dining room and kitchen laid in beautiful quartered oak. When finished these rooms will be as commodious and convenient as any in town. Mr. Forsyth finished the woodwork and Mr. Sasse put on the polishing touches.

A modest deacon was once invited to say grace at a certain dinner. Seeing a clerical looking gentleman further down the table, he thought it would be more becoming to ask him to say grace, so, turning to him to said, "Won't you ask a blessing?" The clerical looking party put his hand to his ear and replied "Speak louder, I am so deaf—so deaf I can't hear." The deacon did not press him.—Boston Globe.

—While some of the Bradford papers are boasting over the newspapers of ancient date, the MIRROR wishes to call attention in a modest way, to some papers that date back prior to the birth of any newspaper man in Bradford. First on the list is the McKean County Journal dated Sept 11th 1855, published by Brewster Freeman and Richard Chadwick. Then comes The Beacon published at Smethport, bearing date of April 6th, 1859, edited by Asa Howe Cory, with his motto from David Crockett "Be sure you are right, then go ahead." The next is the Settler, published at Smethport, by W. S. Orbatt, dated Nov. 9, 1859. The above journals are all five columns, and well filled with interesting news of the day.

—The case of the revocation of the license of the Butts House at Mt. Alton, held in the court house last Friday and Saturday, was of a rather spicy and racy character. Certain testimonies produced on both sides are unfit for publication, and no hotel proprietor is deserving of license to sell liquor that would allow such conduct to his house as was testified to by the witnesses in court, both for the prosecution and defense. They evidently need a Theodore Roosevelt at Mt. Alton to give them a dose of law administered in the proper shape. According to the testimony, the law has been badly fractured in that locality, and the guests of the Butts House will very likely go dry for a long time, or else use the bottle racket as testified to in the evidence

—Last Monday night there was a scene made at East Smethport that had somewhat unfortunate termination. Mr. and Mrs. Rockwell had kindly made up there slight difference and gone to housekeeping again and everything was moving along smoothly when some of the young men arranged for a serenade over the occasion. All kinds of instruments were used to make a libilous noise to disturb the slumbers of the happily re-united couple. This had a tendency to aggravate Mr. Rockwell and he ordered the disturbers of the peace away. They would not heed and finally he fired his gun twice in the air, but they would not cease. Mr. Rockwell then threw a brick into the crowd which unfortunately hit one of the boys by the name of Cunningham and this quitted all further trouble. It is to be hoped that the boys will not commit any more disturbance of this character and will leave Mr. and Mrs. Rockwell alone after this.

—U. G. Murry has been appointed postmaster at Gifford, McKean Co.

—Yesterday afternoon Judge Morrison handed down an order revoking the license of the Butts House at Mt. Alton.

—Joseph J. Sullivan in "Maloney's Mishaps" will be here next Friday, Nov. 22 at Kittredge Opera House accompanied by a full band and orchestra.

—Smethport now has an orchestra composed of home artists, and the work done this week at the hose boys' dance has demonstrated the fact that there is no necessity of sending out of town for music. The orchestra is practicing hard to perfect themselves, and are succeeding beyond their expectation. Hurrah for "Our own" orchestra.

—Messrs. Orcutt & Vreelenburg, of Coudersport, have opened an upholstering establishment in the Masser building on Water street, where they will remain only until Dec. 1st. Mr. Orcutt has run a shop in Coudersport for the past five years and from a personal knowledge of him and his work we cheerfully recommend the firm to the people of Smethport.

—The hose boys' dance, which commenced Tuesday night, was not very well attended at the opening, but on the second night the fire laddies had a good turnout and did fairly well. People seemed backward about tripping the light fantastic toe. Thursday night a good crowd was in attendance and it is expected the boys will come out of their entertainment with a nice little amount in the treasury. They are certainly deserving of patronage.

—At St. Luke's church on last Sunday evening the Right Rev. Dr. Whitehead Bishop of Pittsburg, delivered one of the most effective and practical sermons ever listened to in our town. From the text "No man liveth to himself" the Bishop showed the intense dependence and mutual relationship of people in every state and condition of life, the far reaching influence and wide-spread power of example for each individual case affecting untold numbers for good or evil, the wrong done to others in families and communities by individuals, who neglect christian duties, the debt that every man and every community owes to the Christain religion for so many things affecting even the temporal welfare of individuals and citizens, not to speak of spiritual and eternal results. The sermon was intensely interesting and thoroughly practical and the large congregation gave an absorbing attention. The Bishop administered confirmation to a class of ten. Service was held in Eldred on Monday evening where seven were confirmed and on Tuesday the Bishop went to Port Allegany.

—It is bad enough to try and steal one's hood house but when it comes to bagging two at one shot it is going a little too far, and such is the view the court undoubtedly took of the Ceres school house case, tried here this week. Somewhere back in 1872 the school directors of Ceres bought a school house lot in that township from a Mr. Elliott who did not have a clear title, but the matter went along and the school building did duty until it became necessary to build a new one, which was done some years later. Now Mrs. Clara Simmons, who succeeded to the legal title from Francis Simmons, enters suit in the civil court here trying to secure possession of both buildings on account of defect in the title, but the court ruled that being aware of the defect at the time of their purchase the district holds both school houses. P. E. Cotter was the attorney for the plaintiff and Mullin & Mullin and E. L. Ives man pounded the defendants.

—A rather amusing case was tried before Judge Olmsted, in chambers, Wednesday afternoon that was of very little importance, but it caused considerable laughter. Mrs. M. O'Neil, of Newton near Mt. Alton, was the plaintiff and Andrew Miller, an original character, but withal a very honest and precise man was the defendant. Mr. Miller, in giving his testimony, would wander slightly, but Mr. Bouton the prosecuting attorney would instantly bring him back to the point at issue. Mrs. O'Neil's cow would go into Mr. Miller's field and hence the trouble. The defendant determined to capture the intruder and came with a pail of feed for the purpose. Mrs. O'Neil saw him coming and sent her daughter to drive the cow out of the field. The defendant met the cow in the road and easily captured her with the feed. Mrs. O'Neil coming up, a tug of war ensued between prosecutor and defendant for the possession of the bovine. The defendant, proving the strongest, carried the day and the cow to Mr. Miller. The suit resulted in the jury giving the prosecutor a verdict of $2 10 and costs without leaving their seats. Before the case came to trial Mr. Bouton offered to take a verdict of six cents, but what a lot of sport the court, bar and jury, as well as spectators, would have missed.

—A high-handed piece of robbery was perpetrated yesterday by one of Austin's attorneys, F. E. Baldwin. He came here and at 1 o'clock kidnapped one of our brightest young ladies and carried her away into captivity where she will be compelled to work for her board and clothes the rest of her natural life. These outrages are becoming too common, when young men from a distance can come here in broad daylight and steal our fair damsels, but there is one thing in the young man's favor. Miss Addie Walters, in her lovely wedding dress, appeared as a most beautiful and willing captive, when the groom led her up in front of the Rev. J. W. Sanborn, who in a very impressive manner forged the shackles that bound the young couple together for a long and happy life. Amidst handshaking, goodbye greetings and some tears shed at parting, the happy pair boarded the 2.30 train for their home in Austin where the groom has an extensive and lucrative practice. The people of that place will be the gainers by the addition of the newly wed. The MIRROR wishes them a long and happy life down through the vista of the unknown

Obituary

Mrs. Dellia O. Cornelius was born in Farmers Valley July 20th, 1815, and died in Eastonia, Ohio, Nov. 5th, 1895, aged 80 years, 3 months and 15 days. She was married to Daniel Cornelius in early life, and four children were born to them, all of whom live to mourn the loss of a devoted mother. George and Sterling live in Warren, Pa., Joseph and Anna live in Eastonia, O., and accompanied the remains to Farmers Valley, where on the 19th, after a funeral services in the church they were placed beside those of the husband in the family burying ground on the old place.

Mrs. Cornelius father was one of the first settlers in McKean county, the home farm being a gift from the land owners to Mr. Otto as an inducement for him to settle there. Mrs. Cornelius was converted at the age of 11 years, and ever after held to her faith in Christ. She was a member of the United Brethren church of Farmers Valley, where she lived all her long and useful life until the last five years, when being too feeble to remain alone she went to live with her daughter, about one mile away. Mrs. Anna J. Rice living about three years in Kinzua and their meeting with her children in Ohio. Many are the kind words spoken in her praise, for home was always open to the needy and the hungry. She was always provided at her table and she was often in the sick room, administering to the suffering and cheering them with her smiles and sympathy. She was known far and near, by old and young as Aunt Dellia. She has gone to rest, but her memory is still fresh in the hearts of those who know her.

An Indian's Education.

The physical training of the hunter was a part of the education of every Indian boy and different tribes had different modes of developing the powers of endurance. Among the Omahas the youth were taught to run, not so much to run rapidly for a short distance as to keep up an even pace for many miles, and the habit of careful observation was also inculcated. The runners' services on the tribal hunt were important. It was necessary for them to be able to travel far in search of the buffalo and to return quickly, so that the tribe could go forward and the hunters encompass the herd before it could move any great distance. They must also closely note the topography of the country as they ran here and there in search of the game so as to be able to direct the tribe to the herd over the shortest route, which they might not themselves have traveled. They must also be constantly on the watch for tracks or signs of an enemy, lest they should bring the tribe into danger It was not uncommon for these young men to run from 70 to 100 miles within 24 hours, taking very little rest and food.—"Hunting Customs of the Omahas," by Alice C. Fletcher, in Century

Safer Than Lightning Rods.

Each day adds some new virtues to the long list of those already credited to the pneumatic tire. The latest of these is that the wheels of a bicycle being encircled by a band of India rubber, and dry air, which is a perfect insulator the rider is completely insulated from the earth and consequently is impervious to the attacks of the electric fluid.

Any one who suffers from nervousness during a thunderstorm has now only to go into the dining room or the cellar and seat himself upon the saddle of a pneumatic tire bicycle to be perfectly safe from lightning stroke. As the chances of a man on a bicycle being struck by lightning have been carefully calculated to be about one in a billion, there will, of course, be some pessimists who will deny that this newly discovered virtue of the pneumatic tire amounts to very much. — Pearson's Weekly

LESSONS IN FIRST AID

A TRAINED NURSE TELLS ABOUT QUICK REMEDIES.

Treatment of Dislocations and Sprains How to Place a Bandage—An Improvised Tourniquet—What to Do In Cases of Scalded and Burns.

She was a very capable little woman and usually "sized up" to any occasion, but the care of those children was likely to prove a little too much for her.

When she married a widower and undertook the care of his five boys she knew that she would have to face many unexpected situations, and braced herself to do her best. She was not prepared, however, for what she called the "breakage" in the family. The constant risk to life and limb that five active, sport loving boys were capable of was a new feature in her young life, and she felt that she was in danger of losing her head unless she prepared herself to meet the different calls upon her motherly care.

In her extremity she appealed to her friend, the trained nurse.

"Can't you give me some points," she said. "Tell me of the proper things to do before the doctor comes in case of certain accidents—won't you? Then there are many little things—bruises and burns and things that I could attend to myself without sending for a doctor if I only knew how. Do help me out. Suppose, for instance, one of the boys fell and broke his arm, what should I do before the doctor came?"

"If I were you, I would do nothing but wait, unless the surgeon was delayed. In that case I would simply place the limb in between a folded pillow, fastening the pillow firmly together, thus making a sort of splint.

"You will very likely have a sprain or two to deal with. You can either apply cloths saturated with ice water until the swelling disappears, or you may use very hot water with vinegar in the same way After the swelling has disappeared you had better bandage the limb and let the little patient rest it on a level until it gets strong.

"But I don't know how to apply a bandage, ' was the forlorn reply

"Then it is about time that you did,' said the trained nurse. "Give me a piece of muslin and your bare foot, and I'll show you how '

Then the nurse took the piece of muslin and tore it into strips of 3 inches in width. Then saying ' Always begin at the extremity of a limb and work toward the center of the body from left to right," she placed one of the ends of the strip at the instep and made a turn around the base of the toe. Then she carried the band diagonally over the foot, across the point of the heel and back from the other side, until it coincided with the first turn. This was then covered and carried a second turn around the heel half an inch higher than the first. She then continued to make alternate turns under the sole and behind the heel, crossing over the instep until the entire foot was covered. In finishing the bandage she split the last quarter of a yard of the strip through the middle, wound the ends in opposite direction around the limb and tied them in a bow

Then the band was all unwound again, and the pupil, trying her hand, was delighted to see what a "firm band ago" she could make after two or three attempts.

"In case of dislocation," continued the nurse, "there is always need of instant action Muscular tension increases rapidly and its reduction becomes more difficult with every hour that passes.

"Fingers and thumbs can be set by pulling in place, but be careful not to use too much force. A joint is always weaker after an accident and should be strapped in place until strong again

' Freddie's nose bled awfully the other day and frightened me so because I could not stop it. It stopped itself after awhile, but what should I have done?"

"It is a good thing to press gently the facial artery at the base of the nose and place cold applications to forehead and neck. I suppose you had him lean his head over a basin. Yes, most people do, and that is just the worst attitude possible. You should have made him stand erect, throw his head back and elevate his arms while you held a cold damp sponge to his nostrils. If you have an occasion like that again and the bleeding continues after what I have told you to do has been tried you had better use syringe with salt and ice cold water or a solution of iron.

' In the case of burns or scalds if they are very bad send for your physician but slight ones you can very well attend to. The first thing in such cases is to exclude the air I find that baking soda and sweet oil make a soothing, healing application. If you can't get that conveniently, beat up the white of an egg and apply that with a bandage '

Will you tell me how to stop the flow of blood in case of cut, and then I'll let you go?

"Find the artery that is cut and tie a handkerchief around the limb just over where it bleeds. Tie the handkerchief tightly then make say, three hard knots. In the last knot insert a piece of stick with which you must twist the handkerchief until it is tight enough to stop the flow The handkerchief and stick make as good a tourniquet, as we call it as any one would wish."—Philadelphia Press.

AN URN AND A NICHE.

FACTS ABOUT CREMATION FURNISHED BY A CREMATORY AGENT.

Economy and Cleanliness Among Its Claims. Ashes May Be Left In the Crematory, but Often Mourners Carry Them Away and Keep Them Always Near.

"Cremation this afternoon at 2." These words are lettered on a small sign that swings in a shop window on Houston street, where several curious urns are displayed This is the New York office of a suburban cemetery, where are cremated the bodies of those who prefer that their remains shall be consumed by flame, rather than to let nature take its course in a coffin six feet under the soil.

A World reporter dropped into the office and had a talk with the young man in charge It was too late on that afternoon to witness a cremation, but ordinarily the crematory people are glad to have spectators when the interesting process is going on.

Economy is always considered by most people, and cremation is cheap. It is also clean, and what is cleaner for a last resting place than a white metal vase?

"You know how much you would have to pay for a plot at Greenwood?" said the young man. "At our crematory $25 will buy a niche in which you may place an urn large enough to hold the ashes of an entire family "

There is something sentimental in the ashes of "two souls with but a single thought" being put together There are no rules against buying a row of niches. This, however, is more expensive, and the line of names on the separate urns suggests the search for a name on the walls of a flathouse Yet there are often as many as 12 niches bought in a row Each niche is decorated by the cremation company every Memorial day It is on this occasion that the crematory has its greatest number of visitors.

When the young man was asked what class of people favored cremation he replied ' No particular class of people. In New York the Germans perhaps are the most numerous patrons. It appeals alike to the poor and the wealthy The cost to cremate an adult is $35 and $25 for a child. An urn large enough to contain the ashes of one person can be bought for $6, and this, with the price of a niche, does not bring cremation beyond the reach of the poor man.

"What are the urns made of? Mostly of bronze and white metal. Here is a beauty of serpentine stone " The ' beauty ' was only 20 inches high, but it cost $45 There are about a dozen different designs in urns.

Often a dead person's relatives may desire to keep the ashes in a parlor vase. The young man was asked if all the ashes of those cremated were kept at the cemetery ' Just about one half are," he answered. ' Some are taken away and placed in safety vaults, and some are always kept near the person who most loved the deceased in life. I know of one lady who always carries the ashes of her husband who never she goes. They have been to Europe and back several times, and have had many trips to the seashore and mountains.

"No one but myself ever handles the ashes after they leave the fireman. They are sent to me from there, and I seal each jar and keep them here until they are sent for or until I have too many on hand In that case I notify the relatives. If they want them transferred to an urn, I do it by means of a great glass funnel Do they all look alike? Yes, as though the same funnel? Of course. What a the difference? I clean it after each separate lot of ashes."

He then went over to the big office safe, and, fixing the combination lock, opened the iron door There was exposed a row of black jars about the size of ordinary tomato cans. Each jar was sealed with black wax and tape, and pasted on the front was a label. The young man took out one of the jars and set it on the hand of a woman who wore a number five gloves. She held it easily and read the label. Inside of the jar was all that remained of a large sized man who had been cremated three weeks before.—New York World.

Argentine Woods

The woods peculiar to the Argentine Republic are, as a rule not only distinguished for their positive colors, but some of them are also said to be of a hardness capable of resisting the keenest tools and of withstanding fire in a remarkable degree The algarrobo is described as white, red gray, black and violet, the quebracho is deep red and pure white, the cedar is bright red the cibil is white, red and black, the guayabi is white, gray and black; the laurel is white, black and yellow, the tipa is white red and yellow, the palo amarillo is bright yellow, as is also the palo moro, the viraro is dark brown, the caldenis bright red the tatane is golden yellow the pasura is dark red, the molle is black brown, the lapacho is green gray and black, the guayabo is deep red veined with black and yellow, the palo ribera is dark cinnamon, with red veins the guayacan is black and almost indestructible —New York Sun

Old Marriage Ceremony.

Polynesia is probably the only place in the world where the marriage feast takes place without the presence of the bridegroom For some unexplained reason the young man is 'shut into the bush" when negotiations are opened with the family of his bride and he remains there during the subsequent festivities. It is only when the guests have departed and the girl is left alone with his parents that messengers are dispatched for him

Meekness is imperfect if it be not both active and passive, leading us to subdue our own passions and resentments, as well as to bear patiently the passions and resentments of others.—Foster

SIMON & DOERR,

ELDRED, PA.

Bottlers & Carbonators.

Rochester, Bohemian Export Lager and Pure Native Wines for Family Use.

SIMON & DOERR,

Many cases of so called heart disease, are only cases of acid fermentation in the stomach. The irritation from the acid hinders the action of the heart, through the pneumogastric nerve, and very often the excessive straining power of this peculiarly acting nerve, becomes a very serious matter, the heart makes the greatest effort to do its work, but there is a shortness of breath which cannot be made up for, and the feeling throughout the chest is very distressing. Sometimes this acid arises and causes an acrid smarting in the throat; at other times the burning is up and down the chest.

Another stomach trouble is that form of dyspepsia which gives pain after eating Persons with this disease seem to have but a scant measure of nerve strength, when food is being digested, the stomach needs the concentration of all of the nerve and brain force, and if reading or close thought is attempted soon after eating, the stomach commences that intolerable aching which dyspeptics dread so much, when, the only immediate relief appears to be to stop the mental activity and get up and move around. In such cases there is evidently for the time being, too little nerve power to divide between the stomach and the brain; each one alone needs it all to enable it to perform its labor.

There are two properties possessed by Dr Day's Stomach and Nerve Tonic, which constitute it a cure for all of the above derangements. One, is its power of purifying and sweetening the stomach and stopping the formation of gas and acid, the other is the giving of increased nerve action and strength Soon, with better digestion and better nutrition, there is a general renewal of life and health. The mind of a business man, under its use, soon become clearer and more active, thoughts come easier and are more clearly expressed, the memory is stronger, business plans and ventures are arranged in a better manner and are more patiently and successfully carried out, and details are attended to better because of the increased strength of both mind and muscle.

Women having the care of a household on their minds, find Dr. Day's Stomach and Nerve Tonic to be a great blessing it gives better digestion, better nutrition more strength, cures that feeling of weariness in the morning, that anxiety of mind, that fear that something is going wrong or that something bad is going to happen, cures dizziness, shortness of breath, pressure through the chest, beleching of wind, rumbling in the bowels, headache, all forms of dyspepsia that come from weakness.

Mrs Eben Pierce of Berlin, Potter Co., Pa., write " I can truthfully say that I owe my life to your stomach and nerve tonic I was troubled with my stomach for over a year and tried everything I could hear of, but did not get any benefit I was nearly in despair, for although I had only four in my family I could not begin to do the work for them in addition I was finally induced by a friend to me to try Dr Day's Stomach and Nerve Tonic, and I did I did not expect to ever get any better, but was greatly relieved on taking the first dose and now after taking only one bottle of your remedy I can do my work and my stomach does not hurt me only and my stomach does not hurt me only I do very my work I shall continue its use until I am entirely cured, for I am perfectly satisfied that it will cure all such stomach trouble I thank you dear Doctor, a thousand times over, for putting before the public such a wonderful remedy for human suffering "

Mrs. Albert Hartung of 2305 Fifth Ave., Altoona Pa writes Dr Day's Stomach and Nerve Tonic has done me a power of good that burning after meals has left me I have always been so nervous that I could take no rest at night so had something that I would have for a cup of tea but have not had one since I commenced using your stomach and nerve tonic "

H C Barry, Barkeyville, Pa., says " For years I had a severe pain in my stomach after meals one bottle of Dr. Day's Stomach and Nerve Tonic cured me I think for permanently "

J C. Fulton of Burkettsown, Pa., writes " I have been afflicted with the rheumatism and was laid up in bed a good part of the time, my stomach was in a bad condition and would not retain food I began to use Dr Day's Stomach and Nerve Tonic it not only helped my stomach but relieved me of the rheumatism and also increased my weight wonderfully "
